Comment of the dayThe professional politician

PRESUMING, perhaps rather optimistically, that our civilisation has a future, and again presuming that some future historian will find it worthwhile writing up, there is little doubt that when he comes to assess the total misery of this age, he will hold the professional politician responsible.

What a pass things have come to when in an assembly of the United Nations, the leaders of nations, representing the hopes and aspirations of millions of people, can rise and abuse each other in the language of fish-wives.

And one can go so far as to take off his shoe and pound his desk in a fit of tantrums which, if displayed by a spoilt child, would end in it being sent to bed supperless. Or if one dares to think of the Congo where men behave like clowns.

DEPARTING from the range of international politics, and entering the sphere of domestic political affairs, we find men, entrusted with the welfare of the industrial workers, men who should be cognizant of the economy relating to their market, industry, deliberately rubbing that industry by cutting "wild cat" strikes for no reason more apparent than a son to their sensitive dignity.

And in the affairs of new states cynically declared to be rising to the mature responsibility of self government, we read statements made by their leaders which would be held untenable outside a madhouse. For sheer irresponsibility we have to turn to Singapore where a former leader prophesied that that city could be the "heart of the future."

What, in any language, does that mean?

And right here on our door step, another ambitious embryo politician asks the Chairman of the Urban Council for assurance that neither he nor his staff will seek to exercise tyrannical power, nor crush the people under an iron heel.... Which is about on a par with stopping any innocent man on Queen's Road and asking, "Will you promise not to beat your wife?"

WHEN England, over a century ago, gave a practical example of how a people could find a democracy, and how after the painful passage of the Reform Bill, the depressed classes began to emerge and train themselves for leadership, we saw what politics and politicians could be. One man like James Keir Hardie, lacking everything in fortune but a great heart to serve his own kind, he trained himself until he was able to take his place in the House of Commons.

But where are his kind now? Once again, the people have surrendered power and policy to the ambitious self-seeking few who are prepared to sacrifice everything but their own miserable hides, for self-advancement.

Is it possible that men who clown, men who pose, men who ask silly questions with their eyes on the press, have the cause of humanity at heart? If only we could devise a system whereby the humanitarians led men to the kind of life that almost all men want... a life of peace unworried by fear.

KENNEDY—In the lead.

and ENDS

By REUTER

Philadelphia, Nov. 8. Anna Welsh, who is 108 years old, only 11 days younger than the Republican Party itself, says she is going to the polls today to vote Republican, as she has done at every election since women won suffrage in 1920.

London, Nov. 8. Hundreds of United States airmen, their wives and sweethearts began here today a lavish 24-hour "Presidential Party" against a background of television sets, radios and teleprinters. The marathon festivities will continue through the night until tomorrow evening in the enlisted men's favourite haunt, the Douglas Club in Lancaster Gate.

Cambridge, Nov. 9. Cambridge University's Union Debating Society last night carried by 306 votes to 26 the motion: "This House hopes for a Democratic victory tonight."

Baltimore, Nov. 8. Today's loser can expect to live longer than the winner. The Baltimore Sun said today that Presidents have a mortality rate of 32 per cent above normal. Presidential losers 30 per cent lower than normal.

Emergency meeting

Teipei, Nov. 8. The standing Central Committee of the ruling Kuomintang Party has summoned an emergency meeting to review the situation following the conclusion of the American Presidential election. It is authoritatively learned today.

President Chiang Kai-shek, in his capacity as Director-General of the Party, will preside over the meeting which will take place later this afternoon. The Foreign Minister, Mr. Shen Chang-huan, will report.

The church helped

San Juan, Nov. 8. Puerto Rico's Governor Luis Muñoz tonight claimed victory for his popular Democratic party, and said his margin was greater because of the "dramatic pace" given the campaign by a Catholic church drive to defeat him.

First returns indicated that another landslide was forming for Muñoz to add to his 1952 and 1956 triumphs.—UPI.

DEMOCRATS' SWEEP IN NEW YORK STATE

New York, Nov. 8.

Senator John Kennedy, Democrat, seemed assured of victory in the United States Presidential election tonight when he carried New York State, the biggest prize of the poll.

He had already piled on a lead of more than one million votes over his Republican rival, Vice-President Richard Nixon. Mr. Kennedy took the biggest single prize of the election with New York's 45 electoral votes—and won a State which a candidate normally must carry if he is to be elected.

Only five men in Presidential history have been elected without receiving the State's 45 electoral votes.

Senator Kennedy has also won the 32 votes of Pennsylvania, another key State, and early reports from California (32 electoral votes) Mr. Nixon's home State, said that Mr. Kennedy was ahead there too.

Confident

Returns were far from complete. But barring a dramatic reversal in the voting trends, the 43-year-old Massachusetts Democrat seemed destined to be the first Roman Catholic ever to be elected President.

In Washington, the Democratic National Chairman Mr. Henry M. Jackson predicted tonight that Senator Kennedy would win the Presidency by 100 or more electoral votes. He needs only 205.

Mr. Jackson told a news conference at national headquarters in the Mayflower Hotel that he based his optimistic estimate on Kennedy's "very strong" showing in industrial areas and returns from the South.

With 40 per cent of the vote in the popular count was Kennedy—13,801,000, Nixon—12,310,000.

Mr. Nixon had then won or was leading in states with 173 electoral votes, and Mr. Kennedy led in states with 353 votes.

Kennedy took Connecticut, Maryland and his native state of Massachusetts. He also took

South Carolina with a come-from-behind finish that helped clinch an early Nixon lead, plus West Virginia, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Georgia, and North Carolina.

The Carolinas have the smallest percentages of NIXON—to citizens of any states in the Union, and Kennedy's Roman Catholic religion was a factor many politicians thought would hurt him in South Carolina particularly. Nixon, making his best showing in rural and suburban areas won Kansas, Tennessee, Florida, Arizona, Indiana, Kentucky, Vermont and Oklahoma. He was running up margins in the midwest farm belt.

From behind

In Connecticut, which has a penchant for siding with the winner in Presidential elections, Democratic Governor Abraham Ribicoff said that State's switch from Republican to Democrat was "fantastic."

At Hyannis Port, Mass., where he awaited the election returns, Senator Kennedy "jumped with joy" when Connecticut fell into his column. He had been favoured to carry the State.

Nixon, who all along had forecast a close fight, received the returns in his Los Angeles hotel room. At a late hour there was no sign from him or his campaign managers that they were conceding anything.

Meanwhile in New York, the verdict of the majority of America's big electronic computers was that Kennedy would win after more than four million votes had been counted. The close struggle gave the machines a tough time.

Two television networks operating the "brains" at first forecast victory for Mr. Nixon, but changed sides as Senator Kennedy moved ahead.

Then one of them reported the machine was jumping back and forth between the two candidates and declined to give a forecast.

A third "brain" stood firmly behind Senator Kennedy.

Millions

Millions of Americans were glued to their television sets watching the "electronic battle." With bars closed until polling closed, most people hurried to their homes to follow the election in armchair comfort.

Kansas and other pro-Republican areas gave Nixon an early edge.

But as ballots from the big cities and key industrial states slowly wiped out Nixon's edge, Kennedy took a lead which continued through the evening. By 8 am HK time, Kennedy had increased his margin to more than a million votes and by 11:45 am HK time United Press International count increased his edge to about 1,400,000.

At that point, he was ahead in states with more than enough votes to put him in the White House if the trend continued.

Although there had been signs of apathy early in this Presidential campaign, Americans turned out in record numbers to name their choice for a leader for the next four years.

There was no indication in the early returns whether the issue of Kennedy's Roman Catholic religion had helped or hurt him.—All Agencies.

THE CONGRESS

Washington, Nov. 8. Americans today elected a new congress which on the basis of inconclusive early returns appeared likely to remain under Democratic control but with the Party's current large margin reduced.

Democrats were trailing at 0100 GMT in four of Connecticut's six Congressional districts, now all held by Democrats. In Maine, Republicans were ahead for two House seats now held by Democrats.

One of Maryland's incumbent Democrats also was behind on the basis of early returns.

Associated Press returns on the 437 House elections at 10:30 HKT showed:

Democrats elected 80 (now 280, vacancies 3).

Republicans elected 0 (now 151, vacancies 3).

Democratic gains 0. Republican gains 2.

Democrats leading in 30, including 1 district now Republican.

Republicans leading in 15 including 7 districts now Democratic.

Needed for majority, 219. —UPI.

Democrats again win control of the Senate

Washington, Nov. 8.

Continued Democratic control of the US Senate in the 87th Congress was assured tonight with re-election of eight Democratic incumbents.

The eight Democratic victories made it certain the Party would have at least 51 Senate seats, the minimum needed for control. There were 43 Democratic holdovers.

The Republicans, meanwhile, held two of their Senate seats, those occupied by John S. Cooper (KS) and Clifford P. Case (NJ).

FROM SOUTH

Republicans had conceded they had no chance to capture control in the election, in the face of the 66-34 Democratic margin in the outgoing Congress.

Seven of the first Democratic senators to be elected were from the South.

They included three men who were unopposed—Richard B. Russell (Ga), John L. McClellan (Ark) and Strom Thurmond (SC)—and four others with nominal opposition—Estes Kefauver (Tenn), A. Willis Robertson (Va), James O. Eastland (Miss), and John Sparkman (Ala). The eighth was Robert S. Kerr (Okla).

The Democrats had started with a big edge, 283-154, in the House.

This large margin in both branches had made it necessary for the Republicans to stage a major upset to win control. Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate Lyndon Johnson retained his seat in the Senate. (He was running both for the Senate and the Vice-Presidency).—AP & Reuter.

GARAGE OWNER JAILED FOR TAX EVASION

Northampton, Nov. 8. Robert Frederick Soul, 49, a Buckinghamshire garage owner, was sentenced here yesterday to two years imprisonment for offences under a tax evasion scheme he said he believed was legal.

Soul was alleged to have evaded £25,570 income tax in six years.

The jury convicted him on 15 charges of perjury, forgery, and uttering forged documents, and acquitted him on three other charges. Soul had pleaded not guilty on all charges.

He was ordered to pay £1,200 costs.

His system was to buy property in the names of people with large families, who were eligible for tax allowances, the court was told.

He paid them 10 shillings a week and bonuses at Christmas, and entered the property in their income tax returns.

He controlled the income from the property, but paid no income tax on it.

Altogether he bought about 1,000 properties in the names of 87 nominees.—China Mail Special.

IKE GOES

Washington, Nov. 8. President Eisenhower went to bed tonight with the outcome of the Presidential race still undecided.

James C. Hagerty, White House news secretary, said the President authorised him to send a congratulatory telegram to the winner. When Eisenhower went to bed Senator John F. Kennedy was leading.—UPI.

LADY CHATTERLEY'S LOVER SCOTS MAY BE PROSECUTED
FOR SALES

Edinburgh, Nov. 8.

The possibility of prosecutions for selling the uncensored version of D. H. Lawrence's novel "Lady Chatterley's Lover" is looming over Scottish booksellers.

Mr William Grant, the Lord Advocate, has sent an instruction to all Chief Constables in Scotland that any complaints arising out of the publication of "Lady Chatterley's Lover" must be forwarded to the Crown Office.

It will be for the Lord Advocate to decide whether or not there will be a test case in Scotland, and the ordinary procedure of the courts is not to be used to launch a prosecution, the police have been told.

ACQUITTED

Last week, at the Old Bailey, an English jury—acquitted Penguin Books of publishing an obscene publication by issuing the unexpurgated edition of "Lady Chatterley's Lover" as a paperback.

HK contribution to Countess
Mountbatten fund

London, Nov. 8.

Hongkong has contributed £1,322 to a new charity fund in memory of Countess Mountbatten of Burma, it was announced today.

The fund—to be called the Edwarda Mountbatten Trust—will be formally inaugurated next Wednesday by Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth and nephew of Earl Mountbatten.

The Colony was one of the many parts of the world where the Countess, wife of Earl Mountbatten, wartime Supreme Allied Commander in South-east Asia, gained affection through her work in nursing and child welfare. British North Borneo, where she died suddenly last February, has contributed £238 to the fund, and from Cyprus has come £1,250.

TARGET

The organisers aim at an ultimate target of £5 million from Britain, the Commonwealth and the United States. The money will be devoted to Lady Mountbatten's three greatest interests to which she devoted most of her time and a proportion of her personal wealth—The Save The Children Fund, the Spinal Injuries Ambulance Brigade, and the advancement of nursing.

Ireland—where Countess Mountbatten was the last Viceroy—is making a major effort to raise funds for the Trust with the personal encouragement of the Prime Minister, Mr. De Valera, who was a close personal friend, the organisers stated today.—China Mail Special.

Flying squads break up
demonstration
in Paris

Paris, Nov. 8.

Flying squads of police motorcycleists tonight broke up a demonstration by some 3,000 right-wingers angrily demanding that Franco remain in Algeria.

Massive police reinforcements were on hand when the demonstrators poured out of a Left Bank meeting hall and attempted to march toward the student quarter.

Some demonstrators received blows from nightsticks when the police moved in on foot to support the motorcycle squads speeding through the street to divide the crowd.

LOUD AND ANGRY
The demonstrators—including many Frenchmen from Algeria—had just ended a loud and angry session in the same meeting hall where an equal number of left-wingers met 10 days ago to demand immediate negotiations to end the Algerian insurrection. That crowd, also, had tried to organise a march through the streets and the police stopped them. Some 60 persons were injured in the ensuing clashes.—AP.

MISS ARGENTINA WINS BEAUTY CROWN

London, Nov. 8.

Norma Gladys Cappagli, 21, of Argentina, tonight won the title of Miss World.
Second was Miss Israel; third, Miss South Africa; fourth, Miss Germany and fifth, Miss United States.

The winner's measurements are 30-23-36. She has black hair and brown eyes.
Miss Cappagli, from Buenos Aires, is a professional model.
Her hobbies, she said, are "flower arrangement and classical music."

Different?

Immediately before the Queen of the Beauties was chosen, all of the five finalists were asked personal questions before the audience.

Miss Argentina was asked if she found boys here different from those in Argentina.

"No," she replied, "boys are the same everywhere."

In winning the title, Miss Argentina was given £500 in cash and a trim blue and white sports car.

Miss Israel, the second place winner, got a sports car and £100.

The third place winner, Miss South Africa, received £75.

Miss Germany was given £60 for fourth place.

Miss United States, in fifth place, got £50.—AP.

Mail thieves take cheques for invalid children

Fined on wounding charge

Ip Koon-tung, 24, textile worker, was fined $100 and bound over in $500 for one year by Mr I. M. S. Donnell of North Kowloon Court this morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of wounding.

Sub-inspector I. W. Elias, prosecuting, said that on May 24 complainant, Xu Hoi, a stranger to the defendant, approached the latter and offered a wrist watch for sale at $220 in Yuen Chau Street.

Defendant was then under the impression that the watch was a good one and wanted to swap his own fountain pen and watch for the complainant's watch.

After the exchange, defendant tried to pawn the watch when the pawn broker told him that it was of no value.

Defendant then realised he had been swindled by the complainant and had tried to locate him.

On November 8, defendant saw Xu walking along Castle Peak road, picked up a piece of rock from the ground and threw it on Xu's head causing him to bleed profusely.

Inspector Elias told Mr Donnell that the defendant had a clear record.

Defendant lives in an unnumbered hut in Kwong Tan Tin Village, Tsun Wan.

Gladiator makes last flight

London, Nov. 8.

The last of the famous wartime Gladiator aircraft made its flight from the Gloucester factory at Brockworth in Gloucestershire to Old Warden, Bedfordshire yesterday where it will be housed in the Shuttleworth collection of historic aircraft.

The plane was brought here by Wing Commander R. F. Martin, Gloucester's chief test pilot.

Gladiator was the first plane to shoot down a hostile aircraft over Britain during World War II.

Three of them known as "Faith", "Hope" and "Charity" gained undying fame for the part in the defence of the island of Malta.

Gladiators now make the high speed Javelin.

The 20-year-old veteran biplane was handed over to Air Commodore A. H. Wheeler, trustee of the Shuttleworth collection together with a parchment scroll, the logbooks and a substantial endowment.—China Mail Special.

Gable 'fidgety, but on the mend'

Hollywood, Nov. 8.

Actor Clark Gable, although "fidgety and uncomfortable," voted in the Presidential election today from his hospital bed where he is recovering satisfactorily from a heart attack.

Doctors at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital where the 59-year-old actor has been since being stricken with a coronary thrombosis early on Sunday said he was improving as fast as could be expected.

"I am very pleased with Mr Gable's condition," said Dr Fred Corliss. "His cardiograph looks good, and he is making progress."

He explained that it was natural for heart patients to be uncomfortable, particularly when being administered oxygen through two small plastic tubes inserted in the nostrils.

Gable voted with other patients at the hospital after hospital authorities signed affidavits that they were unable to go to their regular polling places.

Gable made no secret of his choice in the election. He said he voted for Vice President Richard Nixon.—UPI.

Japanese remove war-time guns

Darwin, Nov. 8.

Two nine-inch guns installed near Darwin, in 1941, to repel the Japanese, are now being removed by the Japanese. The guns were never fired in anger.

The barrel of each gun is 28 feet long and weighs 140 tons. The Fujita Salvage Company of Osaka has won the contract to remove the guns. One of the clauses of the contract is that the barrels must be cut up before they are taken away.

The same company is also salvaging ships sunk by the Japanese in Darwin harbour during the war.—China Mail Special.

Bombproof shelter in County Hall

Shrewsbury, Nov. 8.

A new £1,200,000 County Hall is to be built here with a bombproof basement which could be used as a civil defence "nerve centre" in time of war, it is announced.

Germany steps up Singapore sales drive

BUSTLING West German business men, pushing behind the slogan, "Buy German for superior quality," are rapidly widening the economic beach-head they have established in Singapore.

Tall, smiling Rudolf Foerster, secretary at the German Embassy here, thumbed through a thick stack of statistics and told me: "This year our trade here will reach the highest level since the war."

Onslaught

Forty-one-year-old Herr Foerster has good reason to smile. In the first seven months of this year German trade with Singapore was more than £11,000,000—a meteoric 18.4 per cent over the same period last year.

The German onslaught has been directed at traditionally British spheres of economic activity: medicinal products, chemicals, fertilisers, iron and steel products, power generators, scientific apparatus, and motor vehicles.

It is in the motor trade that the Germans have achieved their biggest victory over British makes. The Volkswagen is sweeping the small car market, and bookings for Mercedes luxury models are so heavy that agents are refusing to take any more.

To what does Germany owe this phenomenal success?

Precision

Herr Foerster spread his hands and said: "Not surprising at all. Most Asians prefer German products because of their superior quality."

"That is why we are confident Germany is going to play a big part in the rapid industrialisation of Singapore."

German salesmen and agents set about their business here with thoroughness and precision. All of them keep in close touch with the consulate.

British best

HONGKONG—At last the Americans have decided that the British know best about fighting Communism in South-East Asia.

They are sending to Malaya hand-picked American now stationed in the Red-ridden lands of Laos, Cambodia, and South Vietnam.

In Malaya the Americans will study the tactics and strategy with which Britain's brilliant General Gerald Temple defeated Chin Peng and his once 10,000-strong band of Communist terrorists.

High regard

The first man in is Major-General A. R. Fitch, U.S. Army Deputy Chief of Staff (Intelligence).

General Fitch has said "Communist subversion is still a serious problem in South-East Asia, and Malaya is the only country to have tackled it successfully."

"I have talked to army officers of many Asian countries and they all have such high regard for British-trained officers in the Malayan Army that I have come along to see things for myself."

Why America doesn't hide her rocket bases...

From CHRISTOPHER DOBSON:

Washington.

THE American frontiersman riding through the West took comfort from the log fort-dotted the new land.

He knew they were there to protect him from his most deadly enemies, the Indian tribes.

Now the Indians are gone, but the modern American motorizing through the West can see the new-style forts—rocket bases—being built to protect him against the Russians.

Trade boom

Just as the old wooden forts warned the Indians of the retribution that would descend on them if they attacked settlers or wagon trains, so the rocket sites tell the Russians how any attack on America will be answered.

The rockets have brought trade and prosperity in their wake.

Technicians who man the rockets have good wages to spend and they need food, clothes, and entertainments, school and libraries and theatres.

Local townships, far from being frightened of the rockets are in many cases urging the authorities to set up more bases.

upright at their gables, have already been installed. Work is going on at the Titan bases, where the missiles will be housed in massive concrete silos sunk into the ground.

Ironie twist

Next will be the Minuteman squadrons—some sunk in silos, others mounted on trains and barges on the move all the time.

Two hundred and forty million dollars (£85,714,400) is about to be spent on building 150 silo launching pads for Minuteman rockets clustered in the country around Malmstrom Air Force base in Montana. They will be controlled by 15 remote control posts.

When the order to prepare for firing is given from one of these posts, huge concrete and steel hatches sunk in the countryside will open, calculations will be fed into the Minuteman's electronic brains. The missiles will then be ready to be fired from their almost invulnerable shelters.

Ironically this complex of Minutemen is not far from the Little Big Horn, where the Sioux massacred Custer and his men in a battle which the Indians won locally, but which brought such retribution down on them that they were never an effective fighting force again.

KARIBA DAM IS PAYING OFF

By PHILIP DITTON

GOOD news from Kariba, one of the biggest Empire projects since the War. The £74,000,000 hydro-electric scheme there is paying off already.

Sir Duncan Anderson, 59-year-old chief of the Federal Power Board of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, tells me that Kariba is now producing electricity at almost half the cost estimated by the planners four years ago.

Easy now

Sir Duncan said: "We expected to be operating at a loss for the first two years. But in the first six months we have made a surplus of £350,000."

Kariba was officially opened by the Queen Mother last May. Now survey work has been put in hand for the £48,000,000 worth of further development. And when construction work is started in 1965, half of it will be financed from revenue.

"This will make it relatively easy to borrow the remainder of the money," Sir Duncan forecasts.

Businessmen in politics—here's one against it

BACK on the City "roundabout," I met Mr John I. Snyder Jr. recently. He is president of U.S. Industries Inc., a sort of American Thomas Tilling.

He wanted to talk politics — "I'm a Kennedy man."

I wanted to discuss business prospects.

So we mixed the two together in an hour-long "cocktail" in what used to be the Woolworth headquarters in New Bond-street.

Although now an industrialist himself, Snyder is voting Democrat in the presidential election "because we have had a business man's administration for too long."

A fact

He declared: "This is not good. Businessmen make lousy politicians. It is hard for them to forget self interest."

He expects the American recession to be "very sharp" by the middle of 1961, with perhaps another 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 unemployed.

Chicago-born John Snyder is a cranky 51-year-old with infectious enthusiasm. The big twinkle in his business man's eye just now is for what he calls "mechanical hands."

These are electronic machines designed by the USI group for taking component parts off production lines and assembling them automatically.

They can be used, he claims, for putting together anything from motorcar carburettors to television sets.

These new made-of-all-work are called "Transrobots." Said Snyder: "They are not just an idea. They are a fact. We are starting delivering them early next year."

He explained: "Our object has been to design a catalogue piece of electronic equipment low in price and easy to operate."

"This is one of the ways in which we are moving rapidly into industrial automation. I believe it will be the largest side of our business in two years' time."

As a young man John Snyder studied at the London School of Economics, after graduating at New York University.

Wide range

He joined Kuhn Loeb & Co., the Wall Street investment bankers, and from there moved on 12 years ago to become head of U.S. Industries Inc.

The USI concern was formerly the Pressed Steel Car Co. It hit hard times when demand for freight cars dropped.

Snyder was put in to rebuild the company along forward-looking lines and has been concentrating on that ever since.

Now the group's industrial activities range from oil field equipment — "big opportunities there" — to machine-tools and giant presses for making car bodies.

As a springboard for its products in Europe USI bought the Burtonwood Engineering Co., of Lancashire, a year ago.

But for John Snyder, the going has not been easy. The 1957 recession in America brought hard knocks.

No payment

The dividend on USI's Common shares had to be cut from 80 cents to 15 cents. Last year it was dropped altogether.

How about the present recession? "This time, I don't think it will affect us very much," Snyder told me hopefully.

"Our sales for 1960 should be up from $5 million to 100 million dollars. I reckon next year they will be between 125 million and 1-30 million dollars."

On Wall Street, USI common shares have tumbled from 18½ dollars to around eight dollars.

So I asked John Snyder about dividend chances. For a company president, he was surprisingly candid.

"We shall not pay anything this year," he said. "Every dollar we earn will go back into the business. But we hope to resume payments at the end of 1961."

All of which suggests that, as a speculation, USI shares could be rewarding.

But the cent is on that word "speculation."

Scientists find pig breeding secret

A RESEARCH breakthrough through that could greatly speed the improvement of pigs throughout Britain has just been revealed.

The Hampshire Cattle Breeding Centre at Lyndhurst claims to have solved the problem of artificial insemination of pigs on which world scientists have been working for 25 years.

Attempts have been made in many countries, particularly Russia and Japan, to introduce artificial insemination for pigs. But the number of litters produced has been disappointingly small.

The Government-sponsored Pig Industry Development Authority is spending £7,000 a year subsidising research at seven breeding centres.

Mr Donald Madden, 30-year-old veterinary officer at the Lyndhurst centre, said that his station had achieved 83 per cent fertility with recent inseminations. "That is very little below the rate for natural service."

"We think we have hit on the secret people have been seeking for years," he said. "It is the simplest thing, but it could be of tremendous value to the pig industry."

"It can greatly accelerate the process of finding the best breeding animals."

"In a year it might be possible to breed more than 10,000 piglets from a single boar." The fertility rate at the seven P.I.D.A.-backed stations ranged between 20 per cent and 40 per cent when the subsidy scheme started nearly two years ago.

Several have reported a substantial improvement this year.

Moments of retrospection — for a woman famous in the twenties

by SHEILA CRAIG

"WHY don't you say that she's married to a jerk?" the man in the polka dot dressing gown asked me. "Because," interrupted June, "I'm not. You're just a crazy man."

June—once Lady Inverclyde, now Mrs Edward Hillman jun.—and I were having a drink together in her suite at a London hotel. Mr Hillman was sitting with us while he waited for a sleeping pill to take effect so he could have an afternoon nap.

In addition to his silk dressing gown with the big white dots Mr Hillman was noticeable for the iron grey of his hair, the brownness of his sunburned calves, the flatness of his wide, bare feet, and the gruffness of his voice.

"You don't look 58, for God's sake!" he said. He was speaking to his wife.

He was right. June has a pretty, smooth face still, and her legs are as slim as they were when she was London's favourite dancer in the 'thirties.

She and her multi-millionaire American husband are in England to launch June's book of memoirs.

Her memoirs

"Naturally I was attracted to the idea of marrying a peer," she told me. "Any child who has ever read fairy tales is bound to dream about marrying a prince and owning a castle and living in it happily ever after."

June's baby blue eyes stared absently at a vast bouquet of red carnations on the table beside her.

"But it turned out that Inverclyde had a great inferiority complex. He hated the fact that he couldn't trace his noble ancestry back more than three generations. He was always tremendously impressed with dukes and fourteenth-century barons."

"I think it must have been his sense of inferiority that made him so jealous of me. He wanted it to be absolutely clear that he was lord of the castle, and that the lady of the castle was subservient to him."

June waved a slender hand with varnished red nails in an imperious way. "Step down, little girl. You are no longer the star," she mimicked Lord Inverclyde.

"Eddie is the reversal. He has always been thrilled by my success. He completely lacks pomposity."

"If you want to know the God's truth," he said, "this is a pretty good sleeping pill."

He turned his large bare toes inward and settled down again to await further progress of the pill.

"Eddie is unself-conscious," June continued. "The fact that he is a multi-millionaire doesn't prevent him from going into a drugstore and sitting up at the counter and having a hamburger and malted milk."

"Inverclyde would have starved rather than be seen drinking an ice cream soda at the counter."

"And, in a material way, just compare them. If there's a rise in the stock market, Eddie can't wait to go out and buy me a present or redecorate my bedroom. But there never was any spontaneity in Inverclyde."

"Americans may enjoy their money rather flamboyantly, but at least they enjoy it."

"What do you think of your wife's book?" I asked him.

June answered for him. "He keeps saying to me: 'Mummit, you'll have to read your book to me.'"

"All right!" she continued, now addressing her husband. "I'll chain you to that chair with a Scotch and soda, and I will read it!"

So tiring

"Do you get tired," I asked June, "of people assuming that your book must have been ghost-written?"

"I certainly do," said June. "I wrote my book entirely by myself."

"The only ghost," boomed the voice from the polka-dot dressing gown, "was me."

"Well, I admit you were a spook sometimes," said June. "The only time I could write was after midnight, because up until then we would have guests, or Eddie would be popping in and out, saying: 'Mummit, don't you want something to eat?'"

June slipped her whiskey and looked thoughtful. Then she went on:

"People assume that if you are a dancer or an actress you can't write a word."

"They also assume that stage people are loose morally. They're not, you know. They have to work too hard. It is women who don't work who have time for immorality."

"And I've never heard foul words used by stage people. It is the upper classes and the lower classes who use coarse language."

Comparison

She switched to a comparison of the British and Americans.

"I think Americans are much more straitlaced. There is a basic puritan streak in them. And it shows particularly in this generation of teenagers. It seems as if they're in revolt against their parents' generation — which was loose, which necked and drank too much."

"American girls today all look like boys. Short hair. Pale lipstick. Bermuda shorts. Flat heels. And then they wonder why boys aren't on the make for them."

"I've given lectures to them. 'What's the idea?' I ask. 'How can you expect a boy to want to kiss you if you look like him?'"

"Why do you suppose," I asked, "that so many of your fans here are teenagers who weren't even born when you were on the London stage?"

"I'm not sure," said June. "Unless it's nostalgia for something they've never known themselves. Fifty per cent of my fan mail is from teenagers who say: 'How wonderful to have lived in those times. And they are correct. The frivolity of the 'thirties was wonderful.'"

"I think that one reason girls today wear such eccentric and mad and exciting make-up is to compensate for the relative dullness of the period."

"I think," said a thickened voice, "that this goddamned sleeping pill has worked. I hope you will excuse me."

And the polka dot dressing gown, with Mr Hillman in it, departed from the room.

Soon afterwards I too departed. I left June preparing for an avalanche of visitors.

"I am deeply moved," she said. "By the evidence that so many people remember me 23 years after I left the London stage. Until now I had no idea that I as a person had captured the imagination of a country."

JACOBY BRIDGE

You may not approve of the bidding of today's hands. I am not sure that I do myself, but certainly there can be no quarrel with the final contract of six no-trump.

I have considerable quarrel with the play. South won the opening heart lead in his own hand and led a club to dummy's ace. East showed out and South spent 15 minutes trying to salvage his slam from the wreckage. Needless to say, the salvage act failed miserably.

About 10 seconds thought at trick two would have shown South that he had a safety play that would work against any combination of clubs at all. He should have played the king from his hand.

If both opponents followed, South would have no worries. When East showed out, South would still have no worries. He could lead either the jack or eight and play the appropriate card from dummy after West made his play.

Suppose that West showed out. South would still have no trouble. He would go over to dummy and lead a club. East could play anything he wished but once more South would make his slam.

LONG skirts are wonderfully warm and undeniably graceful. I insist they must not be reserved for grand occasions only.

Shown here is an informal outfit guaranteed to bring out the most feminine qualities in any woman—a black velvet bodice and a braided-trimmed skirt of crimson and black check.

Alternatively, there is a shirwaist top in matching check that would make a second outfit for lazy, warm-clothed winter evenings at home. Velvet top 5½ gns. Shirwaist top 4½ gns. Skirt 13½ gns.

STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Practicing The Scales

—Mr. Punch's Violin-Playing Is Very Squeaky—

By MAX TRELL

MR PUNCH had just made himself comfortable in his rocking chair next to the sunny window. He was just about to shut his eyes, for it was just time for his afternoon nap, when he suddenly thought of something. It was about ten minutes later that Knarf, the Shadow Boy, with his two friends, Teddy, the Stuffed Bear, and Hiawatha, the Small-Sized (and silent) Wooden Indian, came into the room.

"Now where's Mr. Punch?" asked Knarf, nodding toward the empty rocking chair. "He's there every afternoon taking his nap," said Knarf. "Why isn't he there now?" "Yes, that's what I think. Why isn't he there now?" asked Teddy, sounding a little like an echo.

Hi kept silent

Hiawatha hadn't said anything. It was his rule, being a silent Indian, never to speak when he could save himself the trouble of speaking by grunting or pointing.

At this moment, he both grunted and pointed. "Why are you pointing?" Mr. Punch's house. "Hi?" asked Teddy.

For an answer, Hiawatha grunted again and pointed harder toward the Show-House which stood on the other side of the room.

"I guess he means," Knarf said to Teddy, "that Mr. Punch went to his own house."

Curious sounds

Suddenly some curious sounds started coming out of the Show-House. It sounded like a door that was creaking. Knarf and Teddy both looked startled.

"What's Mr. Punch doing anyway?" Knarf exclaimed. "Yes, what's he doing?" echoed Teddy.

Hiawatha just grunted and smiled. Knarf and Teddy ran to the door of Mr. Punch's house. The door was open, so they looked inside.

Playing violin

Then they saw what Mr. Punch was doing. He was playing the violin. Knarf and Hiawatha all stood by the open door watching Mr. Punch as he drew his bow across the strings of his violin. Every time he did so, the whole room became filled with squeaks.

Finally Mr. Punch looked over and saw his three friends watching him. He stopped playing at once.

Smiles and speaks

"Well," he said, smiling, "I guess you're not enjoying my practicing very much." "It's a little squeaky," said Knarf. "Yes, it's a little squeaky," said Teddy.

Hiawatha didn't say anything, but he gave Mr. Punch a look which left no doubt that he thought Mr. Punch's violin-playing was squeakier than a pair of new shoes.

"Of course, my dear friends," Mr. Punch was saying, "you must understand that I wasn't playing a song. What you just heard were scales."

Teddy's puzzled

"What did we just hear?" asked Teddy, sounding puzzled. "Scales, my boy," repeated Mr. Punch.

"Scales?" asked Teddy. "Like a fish?" "Violin-playing has nothing to do with fish," said Mr. Punch.

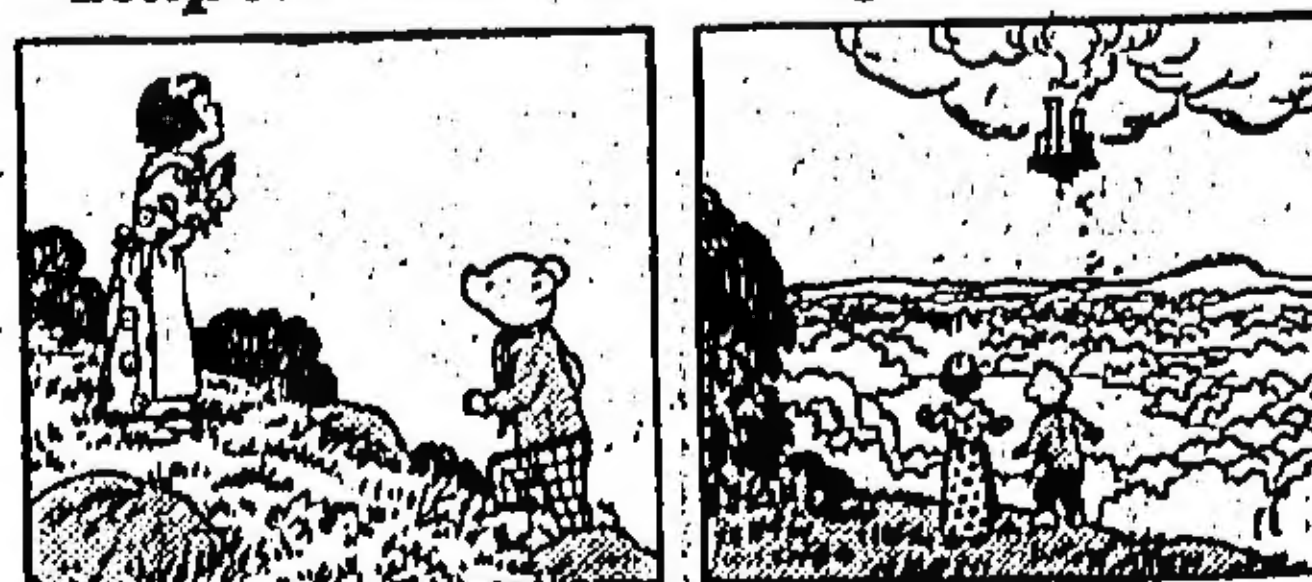

"Scales?" asked Knarf. "What you squeak things with?" "My violin—playing has nothing to do with those kind of scales, either," continued Mr. Punch.

Made a motion

Mr. Punch waited in hopes of hearing Hiawatha say something. But as usual, Hiawatha didn't. All Hiawatha did was to make a motion with one of his hands as though to show someone climbing up one side of a steep hill and sliding down another.

"Exactly! Exactly! Exactly!" shouted Mr. Punch. "That's what a scale is! It's up and down, down and up!"

Rupert and the Sky-boat—41

Rupert calls up the hill to ask Margo what is the matter. "Why doesn't she answer?" he mutters. "Is she feeling unwell?" Why doesn't she come? Rather than willingly he climbs back to find her standing quite still. "What are you staring at?" he asks. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

What TV

did to old

Mrs Jones

SOME months ago a bunch of us, friends of old Mr Jones who had "gone before," clubbed up to buy a television set for his widow.

She had had a pretty rough time since Mr Jones died—largely on account of Old Fred her neighbour.

He pinched her lettuces, frightened her cat, lit bonfires on washday, and generally did his damndest to be difficult.

She needed a diversion.

So the set was installed and for months I meant to visit her. Early last week, before my fall, I did.

Oblivious

The noise of the shooting could be heard before I had the gate open. I knocked and knocked—and eventually let myself in.

Oblivious of all callers, Mrs Smith sat crouched before the television set, her old eyes shining, her little fists flailing as the tough guy's blows landed "crack" on some poor character's defenceless chin.

"That's right," she shouted, and her face jabbed quivered with pent-up emotion. "Do him a fourpenny one. Show his teeth down his throat."

Then, turning to me, she chorled—"That's what I'd like to do to old Fred."

Dear Mrs Jones—our Mrs Jones—that little bundle of lavender and lace with the strong scent of embrocation thrown in!

It's frightening.

THE FLEET'S IN PORT

Navy teams to play local rugby sides in two matches today

By 'PROP'

The Fleet is in port, and tonight its rugby teams take the field against the Club Selection and the Combined Civilians. The first game between Club Selection and Royal Navy "B", will start at 6 pm and will be followed at 7.15 pm by the match between the Combined Civilians and the Royal Navy Selection.

Civilians are fielding quite a few candidates for Colony honours later in the season, notably Kelly and DeBath on the wings, both halves, and Babington, Dwyer, Bedford and Roberts in the pack. Alex Xavier has fully earned his place in this representative game and we wish him well.

Club Selection include six first team players in their side and should therefore feel quite happy about their chances.

Little known

Of the Navy sides little is known. It is enough to say that only two players from HMS Thar have been selected, but it is an indication of strength or is it a move to give more players a chance of a game? There should be a good evening of rugby at the Club.

San Francisco Giants

chalk up eighth win in Japan

Fukuoka, Nov. 8.
Willy Mays, Orlando Cepeda and Mike McCormick each hit a home run today as the San Francisco Giants overpowered Japan's All-Stars 8-4.

Seventeen thousand Japanese fans cheered the power display in the Giants' eighth win against three losses and one tie in their sixteen-game tour.

Trailing 2-0, the Giants opened their scoring on Mays' one-run hit in the sixth inning. They added three in the seventh on Cepeda's and McCormick's roundtrippers.

Willy McCovey drove in the winning scores with a double during a big four-run rally by San Francisco in the eighth.

The All-Stars, cream of Japan's two Major Leagues, filled the bases and bounced starter McCormick in the seventh. Stu Miller put out the fire.

The United States' Bald Eagle, last year's winner, is early favourite at two to one for the $100,000 Washington International Race here on Friday.

The field of eleven is completed by Italy's Rio Marlin and three-year-old filly Santa Severa. Britain's Apple and Prolife, Ireland's Ferny Fox, Russia's Zabez and Ukraine's Zadorny.—China Mail Special.

Sir Donald on suspect bowling actions

Sydney, Nov. 8.
Sir Donald Bradman, chairman of the Australian Board of Cricket Control, said today that he doubted whether the problem of suspect bowling actions would ever be solved.

He said his doubt arose from the fact that "it will always remain a matter for the umpires himself to determine."

Speaking in a television interview, Bradman declared that he did not think it humanly possible to get a precise definition of whether a ball was bowled or thrown. The umpire had only a fraction of a second in which to judge a delivery.

Pointing out that suspect bowling was not a new problem, Sir Donald Bradman said he had found it mentioned in records as early as 1894.—China Mail Special.

Football League

rejects players' demands for higher wages

London, Nov. 8.

Angry professional footballers are meeting to consider what action to take following the rejection of their demands for higher wages and bonuses.

The Football League's extraordinary general council meeting today rejected all the players' major economic demands.

"It is very disappointing to say the least," said Cliff Lloyd the secretary of the Professional Footballers' Association. "We must now consider what action to take. Meetings are being called as quickly as possible. The possibility of a footballers' strike is not ruled out."

Although there were a few compensating smaller concessions to junior players, the principle shocks were:

- ★ No increase in the maximum weekly wage of £20 for top soccer stars.
- ★ No increased bonuses.
- ★ No extra money for additional matches.

It was agreed that the fee for appearing in televised matches will be valued from two pounds to ten guineas.—AFP.

Indonesian hockey team lose again in Singapore

Singapore, Nov. 8.

The visiting Indonesian hockey team were again beaten 1-0 by All-Singapore in the second match of their tour here today.

Singapore's winning goal came three minutes after the interval. With good defensive play the Indonesians gave the Singapore forwards few scoring chances and made the home team fight hard for victory.

Outstanding player in the Indonesian defence was full-back Djanaop who broke up several dangerous attacks with good tackles. Goalkeeper Lisapaly also showed keen anticipation and brought off many brilliant saves.

The Indonesian forward line had fast wingers in Sjarif and Binol but it could not match the tactical play and ball control of the Singapore forwards.

The visitors will play their last match here tomorrow against Singapore Combined Schools.—Reuter.

INTER-SERVICES HOCKEY

NAVY LOSE 3-9 TO ARMY
IN THEIR FIRST MATCH OF THE SEASON

By NUMPERE

The Royal Navy, making their first appearance as a representative side in Hongkong this season, were well beaten by the Army by 9-3 at Sookunpoo last evening.

The Army were without centre-forward N. Rhu Lama, who failed to arrive, and played the first half with 10 men. The Navy loaned a reserve player for the second half but this had no material effect on the result.

This was the Navy's first match together whereas the Army had the advantage of having played as a team all season.

In a fairly even first half both sides scored three times. After the interval play was decidedly scrappy for the first 10 minutes but the Army finally clicked into gear and added six more goals without reply.

The Army went into the attack from the bully-off but Frusher's centre went harmlessly across the face of the goal. Both wings were active but being without a centre-forward, Army wasted several good centres as there was no one there to finish them off, and the Navy's goalkeeper Corless was able to clear strongly.

Scrappy

For the second-half Army had the services of a Navy reserve Fitzergerald on the left wing.

Play was decidedly scrappy in the first few minutes, the few attacks the Navy mounted invariably fizzling out with one of their forwards being offside.

Army gradually took a grip on the game and in the 40th minute Beckett put them ahead from Fitzergerald's centre. Five minutes later Beckett completed his hat-trick when after Ellis missed an attempted clearance, he picked up the ball, dribbled past goalkeeper Corless and pushed the ball into an empty net.

Four more goals came in the next nine minutes with two more from Beckett, one from Frusher and one from Turner, and the Army remained well on top to win fairly easily by 9-3.

The Navy gave the impression that with a few games together, they would be a greatly improved side.

Their forward line is potentially strong but lacked cohesion. They have another match against the RAF at Kai Tak on Friday, before their encounter with the Combined Civilians on Sunday.

JUDGE'S WARNING TO JURY

Danger of accomplice's evidence

Bishop Betts.

British bishop visiting Colony

The Rt Rev S. W. Betts, Bishop of Maidstone and the Archbishop of Canterbury's Episcopal Representative with the Forces, arrived by CPA from Kuala Lumpur yesterday.

In the course of a comprehensive tour of the Royal Navy, Army, and Air Force establishments throughout the Far East, he will stay here ten days.

The Bishop is the guest of the Commander British Forces and Lady Meleod until next Monday.

Later, he will stay at the Dean's House at the invitation of the Very Rev Barry Till and his wife.

Bishop Betts will preach at the special Remembrance Sunday Service at the Headquarters, 48 Gurkha Infantry Brigade Group at Sek Kong.

He will preach over Radio Hongkong the same evening.

Bishop Betts last visited the Colony in March, 1958.

Mr Justice R. H. Mills-Owens, in the Criminal Sessions this morning, warned the jury of five men and two women of the danger of convicting an accused on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice.

Mr Justice Mills-Owens made the direction at the trial of 42-year-old Chinese woman herbalist, Tse Wai-lan, on three charges of using instruments with intent to procure miscarriages for two women.

Tse is alleged to have performed abortions on To Kam-he on two occasions, first in April and then in June. She is also alleged to have used instruments to procure the miscarriage for another woman, Chau Yuen-shan, in June. To later died from tetanus.

Mr Justice Mills-Owens said there were two reasons for treating the evidence of an accomplice with caution, first because an accomplice was a person who is himself or herself a criminal as he or she was a party to the crime, and secondly, an accomplice often had a strong motive to throw all the responsibility of his or her own shoulders.

Convinced

In this case, it was suggested that Chau Yuen-shan and another witness, Liu Shiu-yung, were accomplices.

Mr Justice Mills-Owens said there could not be any doubt that Chau was an accomplice as she had voluntarily submitted herself to an illegal abortion, if the jury believed what she had said.

In this instance, there was no corroboration of Chau's evidence in the legal sense although there was some corroboration in a popular sense.

The judge added, however, that the jury were entitled to convict the accused on the count if they were fully convinced that the accused was guilty of the charge.

It was a matter for the jury to decide if Liu Shiu-yung was an accomplice in this case, Mr Justice Mills-Owens said. If Liu were, then the jury had to make a clear distinction between the first two charges of alleged abortions on To Kam-he.

The judge said that there was no corroboration in the legal sense of Liu's evidence with regard to the first charge, but on the second charge there was certain corroboration by accused's own statement to the police, not corroboration as to the allegation that accused had performed abortion but corroboration on the circumstances of the various visits to accused's clinic.

Acquitted

If the jury disbelieved Liu or were left in a reasonable doubt, then accused must be acquitted of the charges, he said.

Hearing is continuing.

Mr Patrick Yu and Mr Henry Litton represent the accused, on the instructions of Miss Helen Lo of Messrs D'Almeida and Mason.

Mr W. S. W. Davidson, Crown Counsel, appears for the prosecution.

REASON FOR LAST NIGHT'S BLACKOUT

The cracking of a tube in a main boiler at the power plant caused the blackout in several districts of Hongkong yesterday evening.

The Hongkong Electric Co. Ltd explained that it was not possible to guard against such failures. It extended its apologies to the public in a press release this morning.

The release by W. Stoker, General Manager of the power company said:

"At 6.06 pm yesterday, a tube in one of the main 600-lb pressure boiler units split, which resulted in a complete loss of steam from that unit.

By 7.40 p.m.

"Stand-by plant was brought into operation as soon as possible, and all supplies were returned to normal at 7.40 pm.

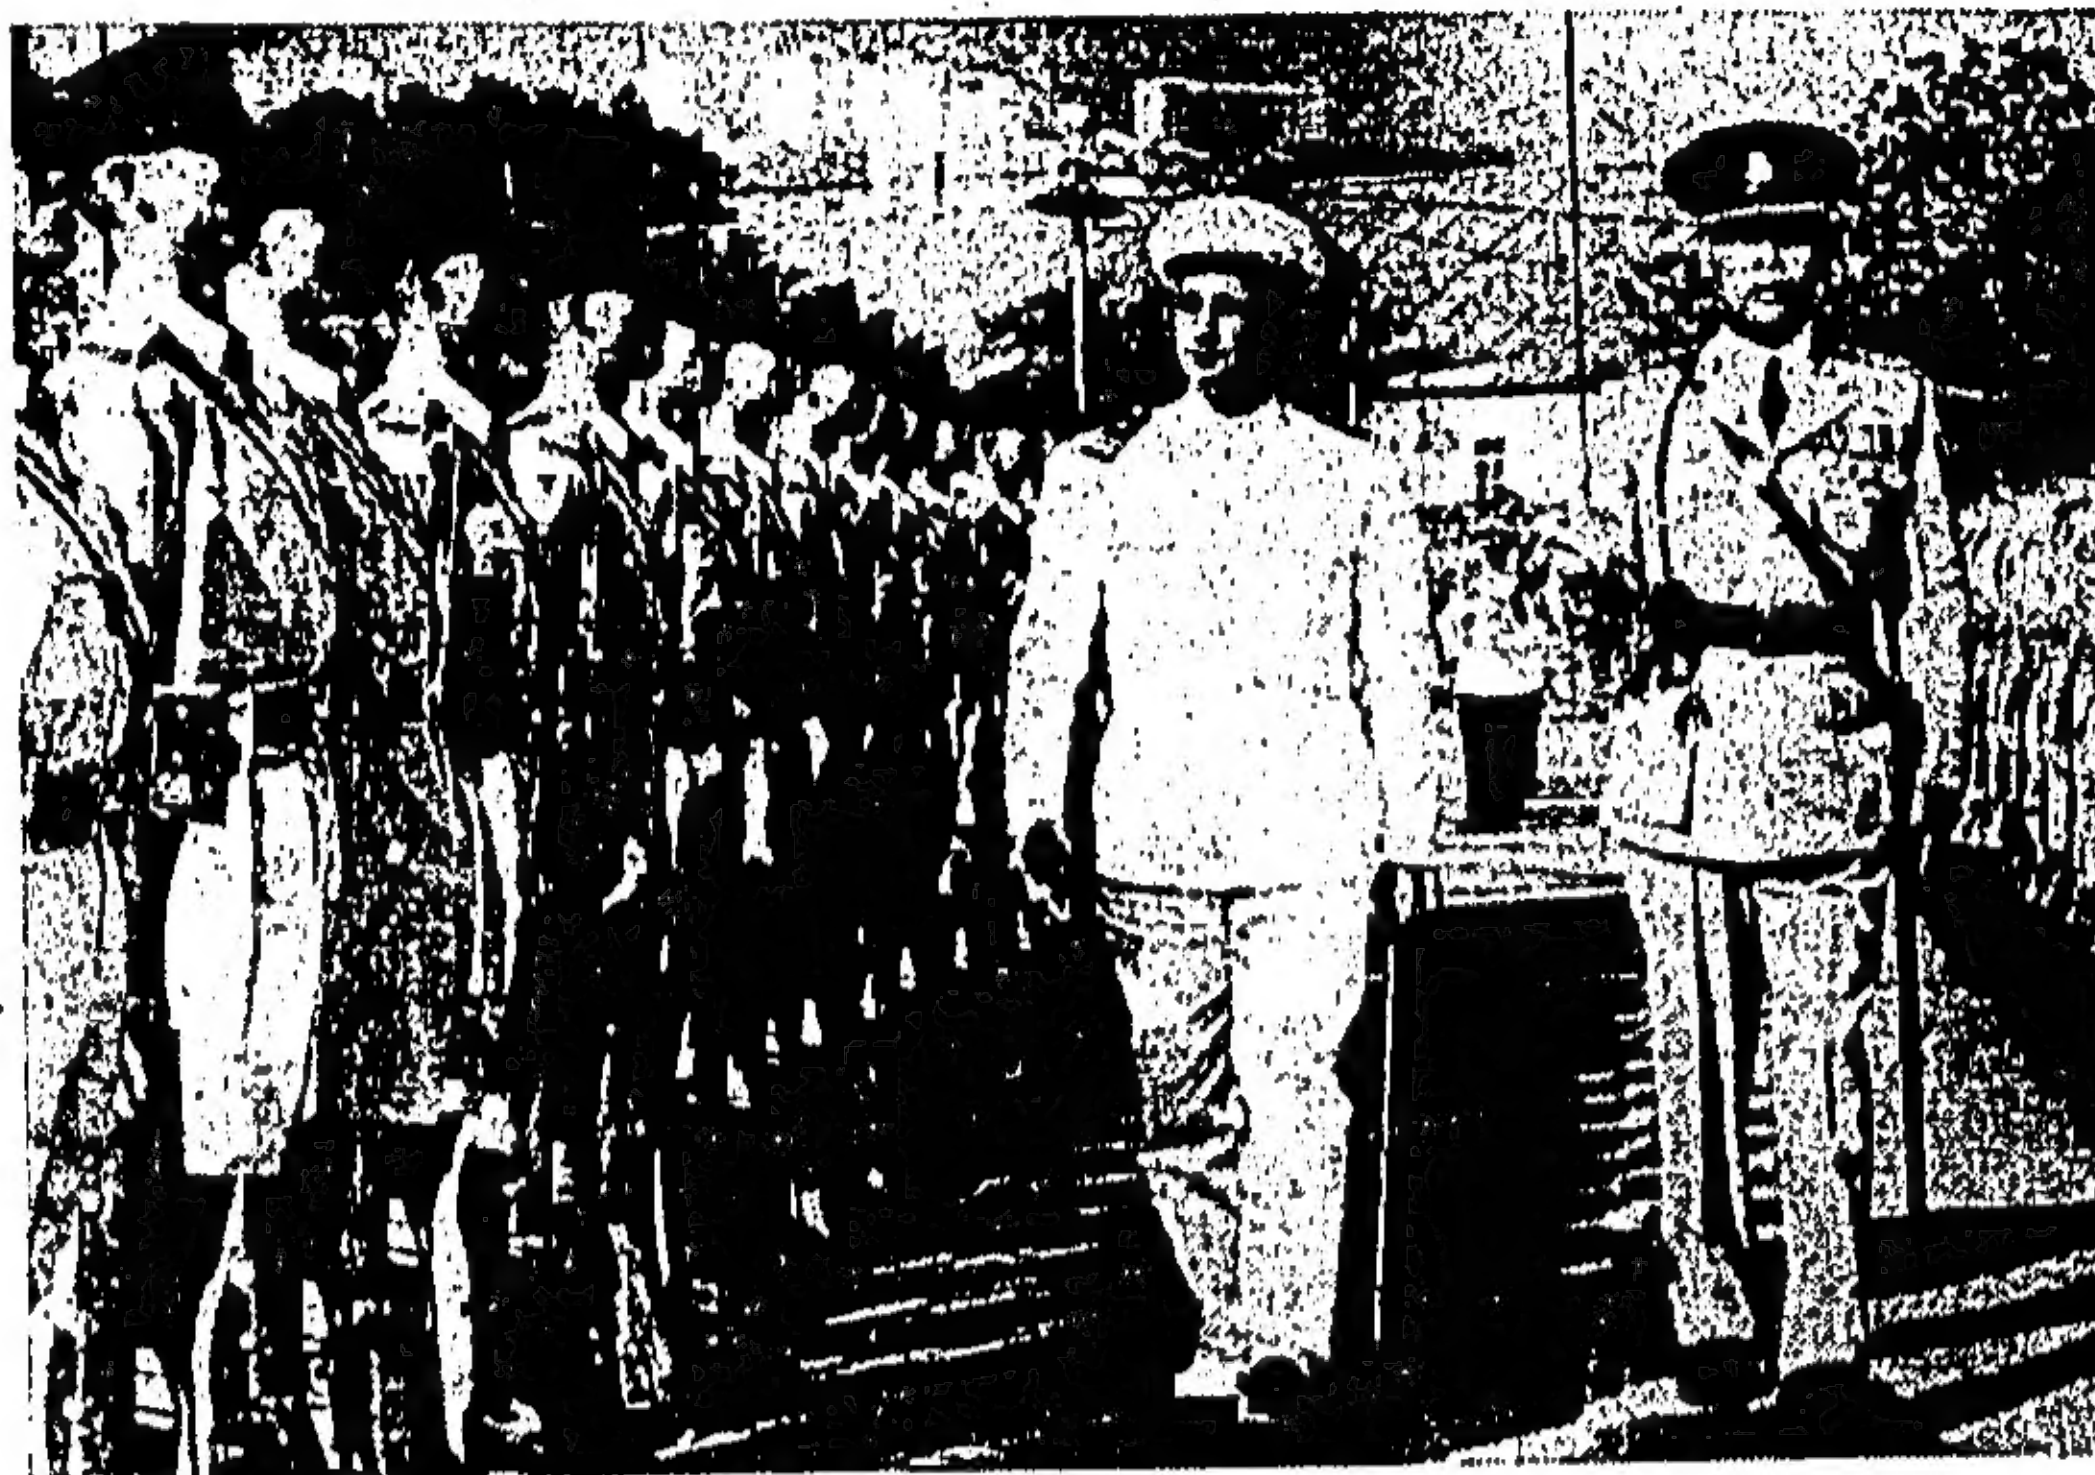

"It was found possible to resume supply in certain parts of the area at an earlier time.

"The company regret the inconvenience to the public, but apart from having plant in stand-by readiness, it is not possible to guard against plant failure."

Execution delayed

MACAO POLICE CHIEF VISITS HK

The Commissioner of Police, Macao, Major Sigismundo Reeves, arrived this morning by the Tai Loi for a two-day official visit to Hongkong. He was accompanied by his secretary, Mr A. S. Basto.

On arrival Major Reeves was met by the Hongkong Commissioner of Police, Mr H. W. E. Heath.

The two Commissioners were then driven to the Police Headquarters, Arsenal-street, where Major Reeves inspected a guard of honour supplied by the Hongkong Police Force.

The Band of the Police Force, under the direction of Mr W. B. Foster, was in attendance.

During his visit here, Major Reeves will have talks with Mr Heath and visit various Police establishments.

Stolen dog leads police to owner, thief is jailed

A stolen dog led a detective to its real owner, it was stated at Central Court this morning.

The dog thief, Yu Kin-chung, 31-year-old plastic worker, of 51 Ching Shan-fong, Li Cheng Uk Village, was sent to jail for two months by Mr Derek Cons. Yu, who had a previous conviction of larceny by trick in 1953, pleaded guilty.

Yu said the reason he stole the dog was "I like the dog because it is very obedient."

Sub-inspector Yip Tai-yau told the court that yesterday morning Yu was seen by detectives leading a dog in Wing Lok-street and acting in a suspicious manner. The policemen stopped Yu and asked him about the dog. He failed to give a satisfactory answer.

Yu was brought back to the police station where he claimed that he bought the dog from someone for $15. His story was disproved.

A detective later let himself be led by the dog to its real owner.

Two more charges of demanding money

Two additional charges of demanding money with menaces were preferred against a man who allegedly pretended he was collecting money on behalf of the Police Anti-Corruption Branch.

Chan Wai, 40, insurance broker, was originally charged with intent to defraud another man of $55.

NEW CHARGES

The new charges alleged that Chan demanded $200 with menaces from two men in Kowloon on October 7 and 22 with intent to steal the money.

Chan, living at 71F Tai Hang Tung Resettlement Estate, first floor, pleaded not guilty.

The Magistrate, Mr Derek Cons, fixed hearing for next Friday.

Det. Sub-Ins Chan Siu-shun prosecuted.

How to address letters to Hongkong

It is correct and proper to address letters to "Hongkong" and "we have no reason for complaint or resentment about letters addressed that way."

Mr S. J. Folwell, Acting Postmaster-General of Hongkong said this in commenting on a statement made in London yesterday by a Conservative MP, Mr R. Gresham Cooke.

Mr Cooke said that addressing letters to "Hongkong" caused resentment in the Colony.

He urged the Prime Minister to instruct Government departments not to address letters to Hongkong.

In the House of Commons, Mr Macmillan had replied, "The Post Office Guide refers simply to 'Hong Kong' which is the correct address."

"I am satisfied that this is already well-known in Government departments," Mr Folwell said, however, there were many individuals in U.S., Australia and other countries who addressed letters to "Hongkong, China."

This was misleading, he said. Where inter-governmental administrative letters are concerned, they have been addressed to "Hongkong" or "Hongkong, Asia."

There is nothing improper about it, he said.

JAILED FOR CORRUPTION

Liu Yu-chung, 26, an assistant health inspector of the Urban Services Department, was sentenced to three months' jail by Mr P. F. X. Leonard at Kowloon Court this morning, when he pleaded guilty to a corruption charge.

Sub-inspector Poon Bing-ill who prosecuted said that on August 2 this year defendant had received $50 from the manager of the Kin Choong Plastics Factory as an inducement to, or on account of two labour inspectors forbearing to take action in relation to the factory, which was alleged to have been unlicensed.

Liu was represented by Mr Patrick Yu instructed by Mr Philip Wong of Messrs Lau, Chan, and Ko.

"Shake-A-Leg's" letter about Lawrence's book makes me wonder if he is really as callow as he makes himself out.

First, the satirical barb about its being an "immortal classic" is not only wide of the mark but suggestive of his ignorance of Lawrence's real literary achievement, as even Lawrence's warmest admirers would not rate "Lady Chatterley's Lover" as his best work of an "immortal classic." Second, the suggestion about finding it (it has been filmed, "S.A.L.") with all the interesting details shows as blithely oblivious to the distinction between the cinema (an essentially visual medium) and literature (an abstract art that allows a considerably greater freedom of physical delineation).

Third, the remark about kids of the kindergarten is irrelevant, as it is meant to be read by adults, not by children. Also irrelevant is the remark that it is what every British man-in-the-street should read; you are not compelled to read it if you don't want to.

Fourth, even a great classic can have its detrimental elements, and would do more harm than good if you don't approach it rightly; thus reading Lawrence's book can benefit those who understand it as a highly moral work, but not those who read it as pornography.

Fifth, it seems curious that "S.A.L." insists upon associating sex with filth. Even a schoolboy would know sex is not filthy, nor would he confound an interest in sex with filthy-mindedness.

It is not "morally depraved" either to "act openly" or to "think secretly" about sex. If one follows one's natural sexual impulses—which is in fact the moral of Lawrence's book.

And, as Professor Trilling puts it, it is sexuality as a game, as a drama or as an expression of mere will or more personality that incurs Lawrence's greatest scorn.

HK, Japan

It does not surprise me in the least to read about a new item in your paper (China Mail 8.11.60, page 3) stating that "nearly half of the Japanese school children believe England is part of the European Continent." I was in London two months ago, and an astonishing number of local residents (adults, not children) think that Hongkong is part of Japan!

An outrageous attempt at robbery with violence took place early yesterday morning at 30 Nathan-road.

Two men, one armed with a knife, gained entrance to the residence on the first floor of Miss Consuelo Rivera, by a ruse and attacked her and her amah. Fortunately the amah managed to escape and raise the alarm, frightening the intruders, who thereupon left the apartment and made off.

During an altercation at the door of the flat, one of the robbers took out a meat knife from his belt and cut her left hand, and almost tore an earring off her ear. Meanwhile the other robber was grappling with the amah on the floor, and she in a frenzy of terror, managed to break away and escape from the room, closely followed by the man.

The noise she made frightened the other robber who released Miss Rivera and fled. Nothing was stolen but the meat knife, a felt hat and a toy water pistol were left behind by the assailants.

Hongkong joins the list of colonies whose jubilee stamps printed by Messrs Bradbury, Wilkinson and Co. have the famous "Flag Staff" error. It is a vertical line about 3 1/2 mm long running from the trees below Windsor Castle to the sky on the left hand of the tower on which the real flag staff is situated. So far it has only been found on the five-cent stamp.
